VIEW OF JERUSALEM FROM OLIVET AS IT WAS IN THE TIME OF CHRIST.

A.

on (Heb. Aharon). The brother of Moses, and three years his elder. The eldest son of Amram and Jochebed, of the tribe of Levi, born B. C. 1574, probably at Memphis, Egypt. He was 83 years old when he sought out his brother, who had just received his commission as prophet and deliverer at the burning bush. His natural eloquence fitted him to be the spokesman of Moses, who was very slow of speech appointed him as the first high-priest of the new nation. He may have been jealous of his brother's great and responsible position at the head of the nation, when he joined his sister Miriam in murmurs against him; but, on the appearance of the leprosy in Miriam, he saw his error, repented, and begged forgiveness of God for both. For his want of faith at the rock of Meribah, he was denied the privilege and high honor of crossing over Jordan into the Promised Land, and died on Mt. Hor, at Mosera (Ex. xx.); and there is a tomb on the very summit light). ABBA, father, as used by Jesus (Mark xiv. 36), and Paul (Rom. viii. 15; Gal. iv. 6). — 2. The name of the fifth (sacred) month, as used after the captivity.

Abad'don (destruction, or the place of the dead). AS-MODEUS in the Apocrypha; APOLYON, Rev. ix. 11; Job xxvi. 6 (destruction).

Abā'na (perennial). The chief river of Damascus, now called Barada. Also known as Amana anciently. There are many channels, nearly all artificial, made for irrigating the thousands of gardens which throughout the whole city and the
